SHARE. ASK. LEARN.

MAKE SURE TO SPEAK UP AT YOUR NEXT APPOINTMENT.

If you’re feeling frustrated with the acne on your face, chest, shoulders, or back, the good news is there’s something you can do about it. First, ask your Dermatology Provider about any specific areas that are bothering you. Then, inquire about a new prescription topical treatment option that is now available that is indicated to treat acne vulgaris.

To help start off your discussion, here are a few questions you should ask:

- Is it common to feel a bit self-conscious about chest, shoulders, and back acne?
- Is sun exposure something I need to be worried about?
- How does diet affect my skin?
- Does sweat from my workouts affect my acne?
- Are there any treatment options available that I can use on my chest, shoulders, and back? Will they also work on my facial acne?

NOTES

Build your acne profile.

Your Dermatology Provider may ask you which treatments or products you are currently using or what treatments or products you have tried before. Take a moment to prepare your profile (and any additional questions you may also want to ask).

My current skin care routine is:

________________________________________________________________________________________

Treatments or products I have tried in the past are:

________________________________________________________________________________________

Additional questions I have for my Dermatology Provider are:

________________________________________________________________________________________

Ask your Dermatology Provider if AKLIEF® (trifarotene) Cream, 0.005% is right for you. AKLIEF Cream is the first retinoid cream proven to work on the face, chest, shoulders, and back.¹

Please see Important Safety Information on next page.

GALDERMA

IMPORTANT SAFETY INFORMATION

Indication: AKLIEF® (trifarotene) Cream, 0.005% is a retinoid indicated for the topical treatment of acne vulgaris in patients 9 years of age and older. Adverse Events: The most common adverse reactions (incidence ≥ 1%) in patients treated with AKLIEF Cream were application site irritation, application site pruritus (itching), and sunburn.

Warnings/Precautions: Patients using AKLIEF Cream may experience erythema, scaling, dryness, and stinging/burning. Use a moisturizer from the initiation of treatment, and, if appropriate, depending upon the severity of these adverse reactions, reduce the frequency of application of AKLIEF Cream, suspend or discontinue use. Avoid application of AKLIEF Cream to cuts, abrasions or eczematous or sunburned skin. Use of “waxing” as a depilatory method should be avoided on skin treated with AKLIEF Cream. Minimize exposure to sunlight and sunlamps. Use sunscreen and protective clothing over treated areas when exposure cannot be avoided.

You are encouraged to report negative side effects of prescription drugs to the FDA. Visit www.fda.gov/medwatch or call 1-800-FDA-1088.